International Call:
Dsource DIC-BHU SDGs Design Challenge B:

<https://dsourcechallenge.org/> [5]

The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), also known as the Global Goals, were adopted by the United Nations in 2015 as a universal call to action to end poverty, protect the planet, and ensure that by 2030 all people enjoy peace and prosperity.

Against this broad, reflective context we need you to brainstorm and look for opportunities where design can now make a difference.

We, therefore, welcome you to this international D'source DIC-BHU Sustainability Development Goals (SDGs) Design Challenge in seeking creative, innovative, out-of-the-box, resourceful, appropriate solutions. We request you to use your creative energies and come out with solution(s) that might become a contribution of immense benefit in a real world situation that is today crying for problem-solving.

The chosen entries will be generously felicitated with accolades. Our intention is to make these solutions available on an open design platform for the maximum benefit of people.

This International call is open to students, fresh graduates, and young designers from around the world. You may work as individuals or work as collaborative groups.

You are also encouraged to seek guidance from faculty members and professionals, because we recognise that it takes collective endeavor to come out with something meaningful.

For the international D'source DIC-BHU Sustainability Development Goals (SDGs) Design Challenge, ten design problem areas have been identified. You may choose to work on one or more than one area. Additionally, you have a choice of identifying your own design problem area outside of the listed areas to work with.

Accordingly, we request the following groups to work as stakeholders with your community of young students, fresh graduates, and young designers, by extending your help in whatever way possible:

To faculty members/teachers, we r [6]

[7] [8] request that you take the initiative to inform, motivate and guide your students to work on finding solutions by addressing the problem areas listed.

To all working professionals, we request that you volunteer some of your time to mentor students or young designers who may be working with you as interns or colleagues.

We also urge faculty members and professionals to go ahead and register so that we can keep you in the loop and acknowledge your help. Further, this will help us build connections and form networks for future references.
